GLUTES & ABS

NOTES:

SUPERSET - Superset means that the exercises are completed alternatively - i.e. If there are three exercises in the superset, you will complete one set of the first exercise, a set of the second exercise and then a set of the third exercise. Repeat each alternating exercise until all sets have been completed.

- Rest Pause - Perform as many reps as possible, rest for 15-20 seconds, then continue until failure.

- Drop Set - After completing the final set, reduce the weight by 20-30% and continue performing reps until failure.

- Optional Abs - It's entirely up to you whether you wish to perform the ab exercises. I don't perform ab-specific exercises as I know they are already being strengthened with big compound movements like squats or deadlifts, but I included them for anyone who loves to feel that real ab burn.

- This program is designed to be done to complete muscle failure on the final set. If your body can keep going, keep going!

- The workout must be completed in a 7 day period. Take rest days whenever is convenient. I like to go straight through Monday to Friday and rest from strength training on a Saturday and Sunday.

- Get a spotter for all days if possible. The spotter is simply there to assist you through your sticking point on the final reps of the final set. They should not be lifting the bar for you unless your muscles actually completely fail.

- The heavier your lift, the more muscle damage you will incur, the more your muscles will grow!
